OLD CHINA'S BIG INDEMNITY

MR. WU MAKES SOME REMARKS RELATING THERETO.

Says that Though China Has Been Slow it is Due to No Fault of Hers that a Settlement Has Not Been Made.

Washington, April 15.—The Chinese Minister was at the State Department today, in conference with Secretary Hay, on the status of negotiations at Pekin. The minister is somewhat concerned over the delay in bringing about a final adjustment and also on the current reports that the indemnities reach a very large-figure, which, he fears, will be beyond the ability of China to meet. Minister Wu said in response to inquiries on these subjects:

"We have been accustomed to hear that China was very slow. But in this case many weeks and months are going by without any delay attributable to China, so far as I have heard, and yet without definite prspect of bringing the negotiations to a close. The unsettled condition is very injurious to China, but it also is an injury which affects the whole world. Take for instance the cotton industry of the south. The shipments to China are very large, but they have been falling off owing to the unsetteld condition of affairs, and the trade is seriously menaced What we need and what the commercial world needs is stability and some definite understanding of what conditions are to be.

"As to the question of indemnities, I receive little direct information. But I have regretted to see some of the published reports that the total of indemnities is reaching a very large sum. It should be borne in mind that China herself has suffered great losses through the recent disturbances, losses which will amount o many millions, and for which she can not hope to receive indemnity. So that if the claims of the powers aggregate $314,000,000, as I see stated, it would probably not be an underestimate to say that China's own losses will reach twice that amount, say, $600,000,000. In the aggregate, therefore, China will be shouldered with a burden of colossal proportions and this will come after the country has passed through a most trying experience.

"I note that a number of suggestions are made that the indemnity should be along the lines of commercial advantages and improvements rather than in money. It has the merits of being unselfish. As I understand it the indemnities thus far asked are based entirely on the interests of the various powers. But the interests of China are worth considering in this matter, for after all the interests of China will have much to do in the end with the interest of all those nations having relations with her and who are carrying on an extensive trade with the East."

Boers Bound for Texas.

By Wire to The Telegram.

New York, April 16.—A family of eight Boer refugees named Vanderweide arrived here today. The father saw ten months active service at the front, and was wounded in the leg. He is on the way to Texas where he hopes to find railroad employment.

Vetoed Compulsory Education.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Jefferson City, Mo., April 16.—Governor Decker has vetoed the compulsory education bill, declaring that the act interferes with the personal rights of parents and savored of paternalism on the part of the state.

On last Saturday one of the canvassers for the public library stated to a citizen of Greensboro that, if sufficient funds could be raised to open a creditable library now, it would be only a question of two or three years before the people would subscribe enough to build a nice library building. He said at once: "When you get ready to do that I will give you $1,000." That is great!

WINSTON'S RATE AND OURS.

Winston Gets 53 Cents From Baltimore as Against Greensboro's 64.

To the Editor of The Telegram:

Referring again to Mr. Jennings' shipment of bananas and the disadvantage he was put to by the fact that other towns are able to secure much cheaper rates, the following facts are worty of note:

Mr. Jennings usually divides a car of bananas with Messrs Efird Brothers of Winston, shipping in car lots to Greensboro, and forwarding half the car to Greensboro. But the agent of the N. & W. got the news through The Telegram of Saturday in regard to the high rate, and was ready at once with a rate of 53 cents from Baltimore to Winston, as against 64 cents from Baltimore to Greensboro. He telegraphed Mr. Jennings to have shipment routed over N. & W. to Winston, divided at Winston and forward his half of the car to Greensboro, instead of forwarding Mr. Efird's half from Greensboro to Winston. Mr. Jennings notified the Southern here that he had this rate and asked if they would duplicate it. The reply was that they were not in a position to guarantee to do so, so the N. & W. gets the long haul.

Wouldn't it seem that now is a good time to invite the N. & W. to come to Greensboro to stay? Mr. Jennings immediately wired the Fruit Dispatch Co., of Baltimore to route car over the N. & W.

THE COMING EDUCATIONAL MEETING

DR. M'IVER TELLS ABOUT IT

MANY OF THE LEADING THINKERS OF THE COUNTRY IN IT.

The Company Travelling on a Special Straight from New York. Will Take Breakfast in Greensboro and Spend the Morning at the Normal—People of the State Should Attend.

The Telegram has repeatedly referred to the educational conference to be held in Winston-Salem, and knowing that it is a gathering of great importance, has secured the following statement from Dr. Charles D. McIver:

"Educationally this is an eventful week for North Carolina, and especially for the Piedmont section of the State. The Conference which is to meet in Winston-Salem on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday promises to be a most interesting and profitable occasion. The object of the meeting is to study the educational conditions in the South, and to consider all possible means of promoting our educational interests.

"Those who are to participate in the Conference are leaders of educational thought in the North and in the South, and include such men as President Gilman of Johns Hopkins University. Dr. James McAlister, president of Drexel Institute, Dr. James E. Russell, Dean of the New York Teachers' College, President Dabney of the University of Tennessee, President Alderman of Tulane University, State Commissioner of Education Glenn, from Georgia, Hon. J. L. M. Curry, General Agent of the Peabody Fund, and President of the Conference, besides a number of other educational leaders from North Carolina and other states.

"Bishop McVickar, of Rhode Island, Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst of New York, Dr. Dickerman, of New Haven, Secretary of the Conference, Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor of the Outlook, Mr. Walter H. Page, editor o fthe The World's Work, Mr. Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews, and other leading clergymen and editors will be present.

"Mr. Robert C. Ogden, partner and manager of John Wanamaker, Mr. George Foster Peabody, of Spencer Trask & Co., Mr. A. S. Frissell, president of the 5th Avenue National Bank, Mr. W. A. Balwin, president of the Long Island Railway, Mr. W. J. Scheffelin, and other leading capitalists of New York, among the most active supporters o fthe Conference, will be present.

"Twenty states will probably be represented at this Conference.

"Besides North Carolina's educational delegation at the Conference it would be worth a great deal to the State if our leading business men and professional men could give a day or two to this great meeting. Such a Conference of teachers, preachers, editors, lawyers, doctors and business men would be profitable even if only North Carolina were represented; but when we consider the fact that those who are coming to us as our guests from the North contribute large sums to education in the South every year; and that they represent and influence those who contribute much more, that they are coming with a most friendly purpose, with a desire to get a clear view of our educational conditions, and to ask our conusel as to how they may make their educational investments so as to secure the best ends, the leaders of thought of this State cannot afford to miss the opportunity of attending the Conference.

"Heretofore a greater portion of the money these people have given has gone to institutions like Hampston Institute in Virginia, and Tuskeegee, Booker Washington's great school, but they also aided in the support of about fifteen smalll schools for white people in North Carolina, and I presume that they give similar help in other states One memeber of the conference I know has given $1,000 to our State Normal and Industrial College.

"Winston and Salem are entertaining as their guests the large number of representativeson the program and members of the Conference, which has been entertained heretofore at Capon Springs, West Virginia. I believe that there are many people who, if they underestand the nature of the meeting, will be glad to run up to Winston-Salemfor a day or two, though they may not be on the program nor members of the Conference. I understand that special railroad rates and special hotel rates will be offered to the visitors.

"Nearly all of these people must pass through Greensboro, and Mr. Ogden's party from New York expects to take breakfast in Greensboro, spending the morning at The State Normal and Industrial College, leaving at 12:25 for Winston-Salem. Such a distinguished party of guests coming as they do from every direction ought to have a genuine welcome from the people of North Carolina.

HARD ON MRS. NATION.

Judge McCauley Says She Can Stop in Kansas City Only Temporarily.

Kansas City, Mo., April 15.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, arrested yesterday, charged with obstructing the street, was arraigned before Police Judge McAuley this morning, fined $500 and given until 6 o'clock this evening to leave the city. The Judge warned Mrs. Nation that if she was found in the city after that hour she would be arrested and placed in jail. She agreed to leave town and 15 minutes later boarded a street car for Kansas City, Kan. Mrs. Nation appeared in court early accompanied by her brother and a woman friend. The court room was literally jammed by a curious crowd. Several cases were called before Mrs. Nation's and she watched the proceedings with manifest impatience. When Judge McAuley finally asked Mrs. Nation what she had to say to the charges, she delivered a tirade against the police and court. She pleaded that she was merely waiting for a car when arrested and was making the best of her time, meanwhile, be talking to the crowd that had gathered. A policeman testified that several cars had passed without Mrs. Nation making an attempt to board any of them. Mrs. Nation flatly denied this statement.

Judge McAuley then gave his decision and warned Mrs. Nation not to come to town again. The fine was suspended. The crowd applauded the decision and followed the joint-smasher to a car bound for the Kansas side of the river. The fine will be held over Mrs. Nation in case she should return and until she is released from the court's order, she is practically barred from visiting Kansas City.

Mrs. Nation pleaded that she wished to go to Liberty Mo., within a few days and asked if she would be permitted to pass through Kansas City en route. Judge McAuley answered in the affirmative, but warned Mrs. Nation not to stop off here.

The Southern in Mississipi.

The victory of the Southern Railway Company before the railroad commission of the State of Mississippi is a splendid tribute to the showing made before the officers of that railroad.

The case grew out of the purchase by the Southern Railway Company of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, running north from Mobile to St. Louis, passing through Mississippi on its way. The cry was raised that the purchase was violative of the laws of competition, and that the sale should not be invalidated by the action of the state railroad commission. Before that body it was shown that the Mobile and Ohio did not parallel the Southern: that its north and south line crossed the Southern's east and west lines twice at right angles, and that instead of curtailing competition of the Southern Railway as against other railways in the state of Mississippi. It was also shown that it had never been the policy of the Southern Railway Company to carry dead ends or unworked lines; that every mile of track was worked for all it was worth, and that it was in this spirit that the Southern desired to enter Missisippi. The plea was so straight-forward and convincing that the commission unanimously dismissed its action against the Southern.

To the people of Georgia, to whom the working of the Southern ssytem is so well known, the action of the Mississippi commission is no surprise. Ten years ago the anti-railroad spirit in Georgia ran very high. Since that time Southern, under the presidency of Mr. Spencer, has dealt so fairly with the people, and has so promptly met every local enterprise, that this feeling has completely disappeared.. Other roads have co-operated, and all past antagonism has disappeared. This is true not only of the political feature, but of the appeals of state railroad commissions on important issues.

Mississippi, therefore, is to be congratulated upon its determination to encourage rather than to antagonize the development in that state of the business and liberal spirit of the Southern Railway.—Exchange.

THE CONQUEST OF MRS. VIVIAN.

By CHARLES KENNETT BURROW.

THE BRISTOWE garden party was a deadly dull affair. I tried to convince myself that I went from a sense of duty, but when a rapid survey failed to reveal the slight figure and delicious irresponsibility of Jack Vivian, the sense of duty theory collapsed. Mrs. Vivian, I thought, had been inclined to treat me somewhat coldly, and I wondered, rather angrily, how she came to have such a daughter as Jack. There was a certain vague semblance between them, certainly, but nothing could convince me that Mrs. Vivian had ever been slight, and my imagination was not strong enough even to suggest that she had ever been irresponsible.

There were not more than half a dozen people whom I knew, and of them not more than two whom I cared to talk to. Most of the men seemed to have got together in the middle of the tennis lawn, the ladies were languishing in the shade of the beeches; only one or two couples seemed to be engaged in occupation for which, surely, garden parties alone were invented. Mrs. Bristowe, my hostess, seemed very much depressed.

"Why don't things move faster, Mr. Mildmay?" she asked, plaintively. "Why don't those wretched men do something?"

"My dear lady," I said, "they never do at these affairs. I don't know why it is; perhaps there's too much daylight for them."

"But one must give garden parties," she said.

"I thank Providence I have no garden," I said. "I might manage a little dance, a very little one, in my studio, but a bachelor can't do that kind of thing, you know."

"I wish you'd go and talk to Mrs. Vivian," she said; "she's sitting all alone there, and thinking of nasty things to say afterward."

I wanted to talk to Mrs. Vivian, so I went. The fact is, I knew that Jack had a great talent for drawing and wanted to cultivate it, and I had a vague idea that I might induce Mrs. Vivian to allow me to give her daughter lessons, particularly as it would cost her nothing. It was a wild notion, but worth trying, and Jack agreed with me. I therefore strolled up to Mrs. Vivian and sat down by her in a casual way.

"The parties here are always so slow, aren't they?" she asked.

"Are they slower here than anywhere else?"

"I trust ours are not so dull," she snapped.

"Ah, but you have a genius for social organization," I said, unblushingly; "and so few people have even talent." I do not wish to depreciate Mrs. Vivian, but her love of flattery was as great as her capacity for small and totally unnecessary lying. She condescended to smile upon me. "People are so different," she said.

"You would notice that all the more after your stay in the country," I said. "How charming the coast is at Penquite, and what glorious sketching ground? I suppose Miss Vivian did some work there?"

She ignored the last part of my question.

"Do you know that part of the world?" she asked.

"Oh, yes," I said, "perfectly.

"That reminds me," she said, smiling again, "that I met a Col. Mildmay at my cousin's house. It did not occur to me that he might be a relative of yours. Is he?"

"He's my uncle, and a dear old boy, too; but I don't see much of him now." Her manner instantly thawed; I believe she had an idea that an artist must necessarily be the son of a fraudulent bankrupt or a fourth-rate actor, or something of that sort. Then she condescended to answer my previous question.

"Indeed, how strange that we should meet in that way! Phoebe painted a good deal while she was there."

I wondered, for a moment, who Phoebe was—I had called her Jack for quite three months.

I felt that I was getting on famously, and was just arranging in my mind how to make the next step when Mrs. Vivian spoke again.

"What a charming place Lord St. Alleyn has at Polgarth," she said.

"Very," I answered, eying her furtively.

"And what a delightful man he is," she said; "we dined there twice."

"He's an old chum of mine," I said; "we were up at Oxford together." I saw her wince, and her manner relaxed even further. I felt profoundly sorry for Jack.

"How interesting," she said.

"I see almost more of him than of any of the old set," I said. "We used to get into glorious scrapes together. He never did any work."

"And I suppose you did?" she suggested.

"A little," I admitted.

"Oh, you young men," she laughed, and wagged her false old head.

I have not, as a rule, been a particularly lucky man, but certainly that afternoon the fates were on my side. As I turned to see what had become of Mrs. Bristowe I beheld the familiar figure of my old friend St. Alleyne come round from the west side of the house. He was strolling along in his usual dreamy, casual way, very well dressed, perfectly at ease, apparently thinking of nothing. I knew the attitude well; it meant that he was in tune for any kind of fun.

Happily he turned into the pathway which ran before the seat on which Mrs. Vivian and I were sitting. He paused for five minutes to talk with Mrs. Bristowe, and then, sighting me, he bore slowly down upon us. I made a sudden move in his direction, which caused my companion's eyes to follow me.

"Who is that very distinguished-looking man?" she asked.

Providence had indeed delivered Mrs. Vivian into my hands! I engaged her eye as I replied, without any show of surprise at the question: "That is Lord St. Alleyne."

I never saw terror sit more palpably upon a face; then, without a word said, the terror changed to beseeching. I really felt sorry for Mrs. Vivian at that moment, but I thought of Jack and hardened my heart.

"Allow me to present you to him," I said. Before she had time to reply I had advanced half a dozen steps to meet him.

"I want to introduce you to Mrs. Vivian," I said. "You know all about my love affair."

"Which one?" he asked.

"The one," I said. He thought carefully for a minute.

"Do you mean Jack?" he asked.

"Of course I do."

"Well?"

"Mrs. Vivian is Jack's mother."

I glanced across the lawn and saw Jack herself, alone, shining white against some dark laurels. My mind was instantly made up.

"Well?" he said, again.

"I want you to talk to her for ten minutes. And, like a dear old chap, say all the nice things you can about me, will you?"

"You want me to bamboozle her, do you?"

"I want to marry Jack," I said.

"All my friends are marrying," St. Alleyne murmured; "they'll soon be all gone. I'm always doing them good turns, and they never do anything for me."

"I'll do anything you like for you if you'll only manage this," I said. As I turned he caught me by the arm.

"Look here," he said, "what am I to talk about—rising artist, increasing popularity and all that kind of thing?"

"I leave it to you. But for heaven's sake don't give me away." He smiled tenderly.

"As if I could," he said.

I saw that Mrs. Vivian's face flamed as I presented him. I had never seen her blush before; but at the same time there was a kind of feeble triumph in her expression that made me sick. St. Alleyne dropped languidly at her side and I sped across the lawn. Mrs. Vivian was at liberty to look as much as she liked; I could trust my friend to hold her.

Jack saw me coming and turned away towards the rose garden; I blessed both her and her acuteness as I followed. She paused when we seemed fairly alone.

"Where have you been all the afternoon?"

"Talking to Mrs. Vivian."

"Oh!" she said, "was it interesting?"

"Very. And you?"

"I've been waiting for you."

"Well, I'm here now. . . . Jack!"

"Yes," she said.

"You want to marry me, don't you, Jack?"

"You silly boy," she said. I took her hand and held it so that no one could see.

"You know you do," I said; "you told me so once."

"Did I?" she asked, closing her fingers tightly over mine.

"Yes; and I'm going to marry you."

"You dear boy!" she said. "But how can you? Mamma will never consent." I thought I detected a hint of tears in her eyes.

"But if I gain her consent, and this very afternoon?"

She looked at me with all her youth on fire. I leaned towards her suddenly and she kissed me; the thing was inevitable. If the world had been looking on I believe she would have kissed me then.

"My dearest Phil," she said, "I'll marry you whenever you like." She stooped above a rose bush and plucked a blossom; I bent over her shoulder, and my lips brushed her ear and cheek deliciously.

"Phil, Phil!" she cried. I followed her glance, and there was Mrs. Vivian sailing towards us, leaning heavily on St. Alleyne's arm!

I felt convinced, by the indifference of St. Alleyne's manner, that he had been doing his duty to me. He left Mrs. Vivian with me, saying: "I'll see you later, old chap," and he added, in a whisper: "Strike now."

I did strike, and I won that afternoon. The feeble objections that Mrs. Vivian offered were easily overcome; I attacked them all triumphantly and gained her consent; it was not given grudgingly, either, and although Jack could not understand it, I could.

I walked home with St. Alleyne afterwards. "I had an awful quarter-of-an-hour with that woman," he said; "you really should have more consideration for a man."

"I'm your eternal debtor," I said. "What did you talk about?"

"You," he said.

"Did that tire you?"

"Horribly," he murmured.

"What do you think of Mrs. Vivian?" I asked. He waved his arm despairingly. "Don't!" he said. "I wouldn't marry into that family to have all my debts paid; not that they worry me much," he added, thoughtfully.

"All you beggars are getting married," he said. "What the deuce am I going to do?"

"Marry Mrs. Vivian," I said; "she's a widow, you know, and would jump at you." He paused on the steps of his club to think about it.

"It would be rather fun, wouldn't it? If I were younger I wouldn't mind, but I'm almost 30, you see. No, Phil, it won't do. It's a beastly thing to be growing old." He sighed mournfully. "I suppose you don't want any dinner? No! I thought not. There's one thing left in life, anyhow—I can always dine."—Idler.

TUESDAY, APRIL 16.

The Telegram does not desire to in any way add to, or renew, in any way, the discussion of the "closed incident" of the registrar cases. At the same time there is one thing that has not been said that should be, because it is well to take note of the fact that is is better to maintain, so far as possible, a spirit of friendliness and magnanimity between men of different parties. The beginning of the end of the registrars cases began when the Charlotte Observer, voicing the thoughts of a large number of leading men of the State, directed towards certain influential Republicans, an appeal for peace and better feeling, which it was shown could only come when these persecutions were stopped. It has been said that if there had been no impeachment trial the cases would not have been nol prossed. Whether that be true, neither we nor others know. But we believe that the way for the whole settlement was made when the better side of the Republicans were appealed to, not in any sense of fear or cringing, but in a spirit of friendliness and magnanimity on both sides.

Our neighbors of Charlotte are simply preparing to have the occasion of the quarter, in the visit of Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister to this country, and a man of broad education and fine intelligence. He will speak on the cotton goods trade in China. Among the prominent out of town people who will attend the banquet are Mr. John Foord, of New York, secretry of the American Asiatic Association, and Mr. Silas D. Webb, prsident of the China and Japan Trading Company. And it may be added that the cotton mill business of this State and section will be very largely represented at the gathering, which, altogether, will, as said, be a very notable one.

This country loves liberty, the kind which a young Englishman felt when, on coming to this country he found to his ineffable delight that it were possible for a person to to walk about the grounds of the White House without any red tape, and that he might actually roll on the grass of the lawn without being seized by an imperial guard. Sister Nation will no doubt feel that in being deprived of the privileges of Kansas City, she has been denied all the rights which Americans love.

The Telegram has recently received several communications with no name except a fictitious one attached. No newspaper prints such articles. We have one today concerning the colored graded schools of this city, signed "Caesar," which we will print when the writer's name is forwarded. We do not want to print his name, but we must know who writes the articles which we are asked to print.

To Deliver an Address.

Rev. C. A. G. Thomas passed through the city this afternoon on his way to Mt. Vernon Springs, where he will deliver an address tomorow morning before the Sandy Creek Association.

"Weeds of Society."

The Story of Snipey and Kipper.

SNIPEY and Kipper stood in the dock, with a don't-care-a-fig-for-anybody air.

"What's the charge against these fellows?" inquired the magistrate.

"Drunk and disorderly, your worship, and assaulting the police."

There was no defense.

"Any previous convictions?" asked his worship, with a sour look at the two youths of promise.

Kipper thrust his hands deep into his pockets; Snipey, somewhat older, watched the dockkeeper with an anxious eye. There were previous convictions.

"That will do!" said his worship severely. "You are evidently incorrigible. Such fellows are the weeds of society. It's a pity you cannot be—er—plucked out. You will be removed to the house of correction for three months." * * *

A raw-footed and broken detachment of a British infantry regiment was stumbling gamely along a dreary ravine in the interior of China. The regiment helped make up a relief force which was hurrying to the rescue of a missionary station. Two smart companies had mustered into the gray light of early morning and had set out to reconnoiter in the hills. Through a childlike faith in the efficiency of the information supplied by a so-called intelligence department, the major commanding the detachment had got hopelessly out of his reckoning. The intelligence department of the Chinese had misled them, and by the late afternoon the British had fallen into an ambush. From the rocky ridges flanking the ravine the Chinese showed now and then the gleam of a scimitar to their prey. Little puffs of smoke appeared more frequently still, and were sometimes followed by sickening little "plops," when the bullet met flesh and bone in the valley. The dead lay sprinkled in the wake of the British in dabs of scarlet, as if they were playing a weird game of hare-and-hounds with death.

The end of their endurance came when the shadows of the rapidly approaching night closed upon them. The word to halt was given and obeyed, although its mellow note killed all hope. Rations of flour and water were passed round, and, with the sentries posted, the little body of British soldiers sat or lay at ease, rifle in hand, waiting for night and—death.

Two hours passed; then the commanding officer was startled from a doze by a hoarse whisper:

"Majer! majer!"

"Hallo!" he snapped. "Who the devil is that?"

"Me, majer—Privit 'Arrison. I've bin a-talkin' the persition over with a mate—friend, beggin' yer pard'n, sir—o' mine, an' we thinks theers a charnce o' savin' the detachment."

There were a few expletives in the darkness.

"Who told the privates the detachment wanted any saving?"

Then there was a sound like a suppressed chuckle, and the whisper reasserted itself. By and by the expletives melted into answering whispers, then followed silence.

Ten minutes after there slipped into the silence the rustle of gently moving men.

"Snipey, ole man!"

"Kipper!".

Two hands groped ridiculously in the inky night until they found each other. A few answering cracks from the hills were followed by the hum of wasted ammunition.

"Majer said as it was a five-ter-one charnce," replied Snipey, with something of importance creeping into his tone.

"Wot else did 'e say, mate, when yer axed 'im?"

"Say? Why, a bloomin' 'air-lifters at fust, as it's 'is nature to. Then says I, 'Me an' my pal, majer, reckons as these pigtails wun't want ter tackle in the darkness, a-cause they might get cut up a bit; so they'll wait an' pot us comferable in the mornin',' 'Right y'are, old chap,' says 'e. Then I says, 'But if we tried to do a guy, majer, ole pal, they'd smell a rat, an' be down on us like a lot o' winter sparrers on a midden.' 'Considerable powers o' penetration,' 'e says. 'Then,' says I, 'majer, here's our plan. Let one or two stop behind an' keep a-firin' from different places, an' they'll think we're all 'ere; then the rest o' the detachment can creep off foxy.' The majer swears, an' says it wos a five-to-one chance. Then 'e thinks a bit. Then 'e says 'e'll try it. Then I volunteers for you an' me to stop, a-cause it wos us wot formerlated the invention. 'Couple of scaps afore you joined, eh?' 'e says.' 'Certn'y, majer,' I says, soothin'-like. Then I feels summat a-foolin' about me in the darkness, an' when I grabbed it I found it wos the majer's hand."

"Snipey," said Kipper reproachfully, "you're a blisterin' liar!"

"That's the kernel of it, mate. It's true about the hand, though, Kip."

Crack, crack! Unceasingly the pitiless rifles told the lurking Chinese that their British pigeons were safe in the nest below.

"Kipper!"

"Ole pal!"

"We gorrer remember one thing. There must be no bloomin' surrenderin'."

"Not a bit o' surrenderin'." There was a decided quaver in the tone now.

"There wun't be no takin' prisoners! We've took a great responserbility on fer the regiment. There's a lot 'o clarse about the regiment, Kip, an' we ain't a-goin' to disgrace it. See?"

"Snipey!"

"Kipper, ole man!" There was the same funny grouping of hands in the dark, the same tight lingering grip when they found each other.

Crack, crack!

"Curse this rifle!" said Snipey. "How she bumps!"

It was nearly 4 o'clock when Kipper spoke again. The blackness was diluted a little over the eastern ridge.

"Snipey," he said, with a weary little sob, "I'm a-gettin' ill!" Then after a pause: "Snipey, d'yer remember what that Crucified Chap said when 'Ee got tired—when 'E wos weary o' waitin', I mean?"

"Don't give yer neck, mate!"

"Him wot the mish'nary told us about when we wos kids," went on Kipper, pathetically. "Wot was it?" Snipey sighed.

"I know, chummy. I was just a-thinking of it meself. "Ow long, O Lord, 'ow long?' "

"That's it!" said Kipper, through his chattering teeth. 'Ow long, O Lord—"

The eastern sky was a golden sea. The rocky ridges and hills beneath seemed blacker than ever, and from that black smudge on the glory of the dawn came half a dozen little puffs of flame, and Kipper's rifle clattered down upon the rocks. Snipey groped about in the gloom, and found his comrade on his knees, gasping and spitting mouthfuls of warm liquid.

"Wot yer doin', Kip?" he said, anxiously.

He stood for a minute, still as the rocks around, then stumbled forward with a sobbing cry of rage and misery. In the dim light he saw Kipper lying on his side, trying in vain to raise himself upon his elbow.

"Kipper!" he whispered softly, falling on his knees beside his chum.

Kipper groaned, and pressed his hand to his right breast.

"Through—the lungs!" he said, in an awed whisper, between the fits of coughing that wrenched him. Snipey pressed his hand, with a sob.

"For the regiment, Snipey!" He raised himself on his elbow, and his chum flung an arm around his neck to support him. There's a bit o' clarse about—the—reg—"

A fresh fit of coughing brought intense agony; after it was over his head fell back.

Snipey pulled out his handkerchief to wipe the blood from the dead lips. It was a miniature copy of the British flag. He remembered how the handkerchiefs had taken the fancy of the soldiers just before they left England, and how the regiment had bought up the whole stock.

He stared stolidly at the quiet face for a minute, them spread the little flag over it.

When Snipey turned once more to face the east the day had broken gloriously. His rifle was empty, and he slipped a fresh cartridge into the breech. Then, with a sudden thought, he fetched Kipper's rifle and loaded that, too.

When the Chinese closed round in the growing light they found their pot-shot prey had flown. A solitary British soldier, with hands and chin resting on the muzzle of his gun, stood awaiting their vengance.

The weapon sprang to the aching shoulder, and one yellow foe lay a corpse. With the report of Kipper's gun another pressed his hand to a mortal wound, and the affair was finished.

But that morning, in the messtents of the rescued regiment, the story of how a couple of weeds had been plucked from the garden of society was told with misty eyes and glowing hearts.—Chicago Herald.

SOME HOSPITALITY.

Why Dives Entertains Lazaru Tries to Entertain Dives.

It may be so, but sometimes it very distinctly is not, but is merely a sort of commercial enterprise.

Hospitaity, so called, is not generally the outcome of benevolence, but policy.

"We must ask that tiresome old Miss Brown-Jones to dinner, for she knowns all the best people, and one meets them at her parties," and "it is no good to ask the Porter girls. They are to pretty that the men have no eyes for any one else, and then, too, they are so impossibly poor."

These are samples of the remarks one hears from society people who are "given to hospitality," and if there is any kindness in their motives it is so well covered in selfishness that it is hard to discover.

Dives does not, as a rule, give banquets to Lazarus, and when he does his action is usually heralded with a flourish of trumpets, so that people applaud him,and he gains social distinction. Without the trumpets one might find the hospitality virtuous, but with them one merely sees that an opportunity of self-advertisement has not been neglected.

Homely gathering of intimate friends may be the occasion of the most chaming hospitality, but they are not fashionable. It is a money grabbing and ambitious age, and it seems that the majority are keenly anxious to earn money and spend it, not in real enjoyment for themeselves or in giving pleasure to others, but in giving dinners to and feting generally people somewhat higher in the social scale than themselves in order to further their own advancement.—Exchane.

Attacked Christian Science.

A furious nattack upon Christian Science was made by Dr. Buckley, editor of the eChristian Advocate, during the sessions of a Methodist Conference in Brooklyn on Wednesday last. He declared that "it is the most subtle form of heresy that the church has encountered since the Third Century. It denies and ridicules all other doctrines, opposing even good morals. To those who do not accept it as a gospel it offers healing. To those who will not accept it as a system of healing it offers practical freedom from personal responsibility. It destroys the nature of sin and the idea of repentenance." The occassion of this outburst was the discussion of a resolution complimentary to the personal worth of a brother who had withdrawn from the church to become a Christian Scientist. Dr. Buckley, who opposed the resolution, said indignantly: 'An atheist cannot do us as much harm as a person of this class, for an honest man is better than an arrant fool." This view was finally adopted by the conference by a vote of 170 to 5.

Death at High Point.

High Point, April 16.—Yesterday afternoon at her home in the western part of the town Mrs. B. C. Lambeth passed away. Death was due to pneumonia. The funeral services occurred this morning at eleven o'clock, conducted by Rev. Dr. J. B. Richardson of the Baptist church. Deceased was a daughter of Mrs. Lou Brown of this place and a sister of Mr. W. G. Brown of the Charlotte Observer Printing House.

Sold by C. E. Holton, druggist.

GLORIOUS NEWS

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help: but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved,—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. Itstimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by C. E. Holton, druggist. Guaranteed.

Women are Like Flowers. Healthy and strong they blossom and bloom. Sickly, they wither and die. Every woman ought to look well and feel well. It's her right and duty, but she might as well try to put out a fire with oil as to be healthy and attractive with disease corroding the organs that make her a woman. Upon their health depends her health. If there is inflammation or weakening drains or suffering at the monthly period, attend to it at once. Don't delay. You're one step nearer the grave every day you put it off. Women can stand a great deal, but they cannot live forever with disease dragging at the most delicate and vital organs in their body. You may have been deceived in so-called cures. We don't see how you could help it—there is so much worthless stuff on the market. But you won't be disappointed in Bradfield's Female Regulator. We believe it is the one medicine on earth for womanly ills. There is as much difference between it and other so-called remedies as there is between right and wrong. Bradfield's Female Regulator soothes the pain, stops the drains, promotes regularity, strengthens, purifies and cleanses. It does all this quickly and easily and naturally. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. Bradfield's Regulator lies at hand. $1 per bottle at drug store.

Mr. Ireland Thinks the People Voted for it and Should Have It.

To the Editor of The Telegram:

"In your paper of Saturday you say, "Will license be granted to Mr. Barker to sell liquor on West Market street?" Why shouldn't Mr. Barker have license? What right has any one to refuse the mto him? Didn't the citizens of this place agree by ballot to turn the city over to the barkeepers? The matter was fairly and fully discussed and the people by a good majortiy voted to open the barrooms and give every man who would comply with the conditions, i. e., pay $1,000, and he should have every privilege of ruining the youths and boys of Greensboro to his heart's content: It is true Davie street was excluded. But Davie street, you know, has but few homes and no churches on it, and as this business has become so honorable, moral and respectable, they should be located amongst the dry goods stores, and in near proximity to the churches. So that the ladies and children of the city should have the privilege of passing them, both going to church and to school. No, no, the people clammored for it, they have it, let them take their medicine. Nothing narrow or bigoted about it. This is an open town. Wide open. Give us liberty, liberty to make our old men drunk, our young men vagabonds, our boys jail birds; liberty to stagger along the streets, to wallow in the mire. Liberty, American liberty. Yes sir give us what we voted for. "To the victor belongs the spoils." This town is wide open. No thing narrow about us. We'll agree to keep off of Davie street, that's sacred ground, but West Market, South Elm, and other streets, the people voted to turn them over to the barrooms. Yes, sir, open up on West Market. Why, of course they will, why shouldn't they? May God save this city. It's men have lost their bearings.
